CHAPTER 15

A Knock Came To My Door

After being married for about two years, my husband and I, along with our one-year-old son, moved to a home in the city just three houses away from a bustling street. Within a few years, the two lane street expanded into six lanes of rushing traffic. By that time, our small family of three had grown into a family of six with four children going to elementary school. Sixteen times a day during the school year at least one of my little tikes had to cross that busy street between going to school, playing in sports and attending other community activities.

Sometimes they had a crossing guard to help them. Other times they were on their own.

An uneasy feeling began to grow within me that my children were not safe. It was just a matter of time before one or more of them were going to get seriously injured while crossing that street.

Added to that concern, was the fact that when my eldest son attended his first year of junior high school I noticed that gangs, along with increasing drug problems were forming in our neighborhood. Between the busy street and the gang/drug problems, I started to feel concerned about our circumstances. I felt it was imperative that we move our family to a different location.

Pouring Out the Desires of My Heart

Instead of getting all worried and obsessed about these problems, I decided to create a solution for the situation in my mind and get excited about those possibilities now coming into our family's life. I went to my source of strength and power. I connected to my Team. Together we formed a Council Meeting. As the meeting commenced, we became one in purpose to form the perfect plan to assuage my family's concerns.

While I was on my knees in the middle of that gathering, I shared the specific desires of my heart. I told them about how I would love to be able to sell our home in the city, purchase land in the country, build a home and move my family. I thought it would be wonderful if we could move six weeks before the end of the school year. That way the children could go to their new school and also develop friendships with the children that lived in and around the neighborhood. Then, all summer they would be able to build on these friendships and start the school year without being the new kids.

I also spoke about my wish to help find a way to pay for this change. I preferred to lift this additional financial burden off my husband's shoulders so he could enjoy this adventure with the rest of us. The plan was to make great money in a short amount of time.

Meanwhile, I was also attending college. The emphasis on my studies was in Psychology, Spanish and Writing. Not business. As I spoke in this Team planning session, I acknowledged this fact. I realized I didn't have a piece of paper that would convince others that I was an intelligent person. But I knew that my mind was bright, teachable and willing to receive the information this powerful Divine source could give me.

I made the commitment to release all fear. I would accept anything my Team presented to me because I was certain they would prepare an avenue for me to attain this goal. I totally trusted in my Team's ability to give me the skills and knowledge that was required. I also believed I would be able to receive and understand this knowledge when they provided it to me.

Then, I became even more specific in my desire to create with them. My first preference was to be able to work when my children were in school and still have flexibility to spend quality time with them. My next choice was to be able to take a couple of college classes and support my husband by helping in our business. And my last request was to oversee and help build our home because I absolutely loved to build and create things.

As we wrapped up our meeting I had a fabulous feeling all was well. I also felt really excited about discovering and receiving what was being cooked up for me to do. Whatever it was, I trusted it would be the perfect opportunity I chose to experience. I didn't fret and worry at all about how these goals would be accomplished. Rather, I just let go of the details and stayed open to receive whatever came to me.

“Do You Think You Would Be Able to Run This Business?”

One day, not long after the pow-wow with my special Team, a knock came to the front door of our home. When Ronnie opened the door there stood Judy, our neighbor from across the street. She explained she was the Director of Human Resources for a large national cable TV business that was also in Tucson. The company needed a subcontractor to do their collections work. She went on to explain that she had been observing us and knew we had fallen on hard times a few years earlier (when Ronnie was working construction and there was a moratorium on building). She noticed we didn't get discouraged or give up. Instead, we still took good care of our home and our family. Ronnie and I also helped each other pull things together when he decided to form a new business. She saw our entrepreneurial spirit and felt we were the ones to do this collections work.

My husband already had his hands full running our new company. He told the neighbor he didn't have the time to devote to forming another business. And he definitely didn't have the extra energy to run it either. Turning to look at me he asked, "Do you think you would be able to run this business?"

Because of the Team council meeting I had previously experienced, I was able to respond without any hesitation. Instead of shrinking back with fear or uncertainty, I was able to eagerly reply, "YES!" I knew this was the opportunity I had been looking for. A moment like this is why those meetings are so important!

I did not know how I was going to accomplish this work, but I clearly understood one thing for sure: the Team I worked with have inspired among the most outstanding and motivated people who ever worked in business. If those people could receive that inspiration, so could I!

With that steadfast, supportive thought in mind, I went back to the Divine and humbly asked for the information that would be required to do the job. It was readily given to me.

The Pure Flood of Intelligence

Suddenly, it seemed like the top of my head was opened up and information just started rushing in! I grabbed a pen and paper and began writing as fast as my hands could move. When I was finished, I surveyed the details of the pure flood of intelligence I had just received. I was amazed. Before my eyes were the well-organized business plans I required. I was told how to hire the people, how to orient them and what tools they needed to have before I sent them out into the field. The information I recorded even included the list of things I was to purchase to get everything set up and operational.

Next, I was to meet with the company hiring me. I didn't know exactly what to say to guarantee them their company was in good hands, but I did know who had that assurance.

The Voice of the Flesh Verses the Voice of Inspiration

My mind started to fill with questions from the voice of my mortal body. It was the weak, shaky, wavering voice of the flesh:

"Why would this company want to hire me? I am just a homemaker with four children and I was still attending college. Sure, I have talent and a strong desire to progress and succeed, but I have nothing that would be a big selling point."

Remembering that this voice of lack never comes from the Divine, I acknowledged that doubting, discouraging and sabotaging monologue in my head. Instead of pushing it back down within me, or shooing it away like a pesky fly, I swiftly and purposefully cast it aside and completely released it from my soul before it could get a footing in what was being created.

Then, I began hearing the sweet, encouraging whisperings of my Team. They shared with me why I was the perfect candidate for this job. I was self-motivated yet flexible and able to turn on a dime. I could give out assignments and allow others to do their jobs. I was aware and sensitive to what was going on around me and was able make corrections in the course midstream. I could make the hard calls and set healthy boundaries while still encouraging and motivating others. I was well-organized and exact. I didn't give up when things became challenging. In fact, my confidence in learning from the opportunity just strengthened my courage and resolve. I wasn't a quitter. People could count on me to follow through with my commitments.

On my own, I freely acknowledge I am not very capable. But when I unite with the Divine I am absolutely certain of what the outcome of any endeavor will be. It has been and always will be successful. I knew I would be able to glean whatever experience I wished to learn about. I could feel my sure confidence in this forthcoming adventure begin to swell and expand within me as I more fully allowed myself to connect with them.

I continued to allow that shift and confidence to build within me; recognizing and acknowledging that I actually did have lots of strengths. In fact, those who knew me in my community viewed me as a devoted mother, an innovative homemaker as well as a straight A college student. And, in this newly forming situation, my Team clearly saw me as one heck of an executive!

I wondered how I should physically present myself in the upcoming meeting. I understood that I was to look and act in a professional manner to support the creative changes that were happening within me. My Team clearly instructed me in that goal. All the details of my dress, shoes, hair and makeup were given to me. Even the exact colors of my clothing were included. I later learned they were power colors.

Basically, I was told to relax and enjoy this process. My Team would provide all the support I required. Uniting with me in my vessel, my Team would allow their flow of confidence and well-being to flow from them, through me and into the people interviewing me. I was transformed into that executive I had envisioned through their inspiration and encouragement. The company hired me on the spot when I went for the initial interview. I drove home giggling out loud with delight about what had transpired thus far.

Putting the Business Plan into Action

I immediately started hiring, orienting and training people. Right away, we began receiving work orders; routing them in zip codes and sending people out into the field to start collecting money, converter boxes and remotes. If no one was home, they left a door hanger.

I also spot checked all the areas in the work field by personally going to some of the homes in each zip-code area where we had work orders and performing the same duties as the individuals working with me. By doing this, I could better understand what the workers were encountering and also knew more precisely what the people using the services needed as well. It helped me stay in touch with the pulse of the situation and I always had a clear viewpoint about what the customers and the subcontractors I had hired were experiencing.

Often, executives of businesses are so removed from the day to day minutia of their business that they actually are quite detached from what is really occurring in the trenches. When this happens, they can become unaware of the demands they have placed on their employees. Their workers start feeling unappreciated and the business fails to thrive because of the negative environment. Instead of feeling like a team player, they begin to feel like slaves. The business then begins to implode.

My oldest daughter once described the situation like this: a team soldier will take the hard slings and arrows for his beloved, caring leader in the heat of battle, but a slave will bend down and let his aloof master receive the onslaught of heavy hits alone. I have always felt a true leader was also a servant to those they led; no one is superior to anyone else. So, that's what I tried to be to my employees: a true leader.

The fledgling business worked well. Amazingly, we were in the black, making a profit, the very first month! That is pretty much unheard of with a startup company, but not while playing with this Team!

I ended up hiring over forty people. One weekend out of the month we collected about $40,000 for the company we contracted for (in the early 1980s that money was twice as much as the mortgage of our home). During the rest of the month, we did cleanup collections and post follow up door hangers. My personal payout was $1,000 a month after taxes and there were substantial bonuses on top of that figure. Not bad considering that our mortgage for our home was only $172 an month.

We also had to haul in a truck-load of equipment to the downtown office for the cable company (actually, what we used was our bronze-colored, family Ford station wagon). We were really busy! During that same weekend I handled and organized 4,000 work orders which translated into 16,000 pieces of paper. Without using a computer, I developed a system to quickly locate any one of those papers and we always balanced to the penny with the monies we collected.

Making the Move

In the meantime, we were able to purchase four acres of land in the beautiful northeast foothills of Tucson. It felt like things were falling into place because we quickly found the land and received our funds to build our home. We promptly sold off two parcels that were one acre each. The first parcel paid off all the land and the second one gave us a substantial amount to build our house!

We sold our home in the city and moved out to the country six weeks before the children finished their school year. They started in their new schools and quickly began making friends. I continued to work with our other company, attend college and spend quality time with my family while overseeing and helping with the building of our home.

It was exactly what I had requested in the Council Meeting with my Team.

Oops! No Money Allotted For Furniture

While we were building our new home, we lived in a small trailer. We had one twin bed in one bedroom under which we stuffed our sleeping bags. Ronnie and I slept on a pull out couch/bed in the living room. The only other bedroom was used as an office to run the collection company.

After two years, the project was finally completed and it was time for us to move into our new home. There was just one snag to the plan: we didn't have the money to purchase furniture.

Then one day, Ronnie came home from a business convention, in Las Vegas. When I greeted him at the door, he was pale and unshaven. He hadn't slept that weekend and looked tuckered out. I asked him if he was all right. All he could reply was, "I just kept winning and winning and winning." Then he handed me a big rolled up wad of money and told me to go buy beds and furniture for our new home! We bought everything we desired, including fresh piles of sheets, pillows and comforters and moved them into the house. The kids were so grateful to finally have beds again that they laid in them for days!

Time for a Change

One day I felt a change come over me. I realized the original reason for my request for the collections work had been fulfilled. I was juggling too many things and understood it was time to let go of this responsibility. I didn't know exactly how to do this. I knew I didn't desire to be fired, and I didn't wish to quit or leave the company dangling without someone to provide those services for them. Plus, I still had a contract to honor. With those thoughts in mind, I went back to my Team and called another Council Meeting to share with them what I now would love to see happen. And I also included the details about being released from that commitment while being free of the consequences of being fired or quitting.

I didn't know how my Team would be able to create what I was seeking since it seemed my request painted us into a corner (there were just not too many other options available). Yet I felt peace and absolute confidence in what the outcome would be.

Not long after I formed that preference within my soul and finished my meeting with my Team, I received a phone call from Sam, one of the head people at the cable business. He began the conversation by reminding me that the company had been sold several times. Then he informed me that the new owners had their own in-house collection department within their existing business.

This man was calling to inform me that they no longer needed my services! The line went quiet on both ends. He knew and I knew we still had a contract with one another. We both grasped the crux of the matter: the owners needed to come up with an amount to pay us off. I had them by the short hairs. (Crudely put, but accurate!)

However, instead of feeling offended, used up, cast aside or rejected by this company, I clearly understood that this was the perfect answer to what I had asked for. With that realization, I immediately knew what my response would be.

So I told him, "When this conversation is finished, our contract will be completed."

"What did you say?" was his surprised reply.

"I said, when this conversation is finished our contract will be completed."

Relieved, Sam visited with me for a few moments longer. We exchanged our appreciation for each other and best wishes, and then said good-bye.

When I hung up the phone, I breathed a happy sigh. The literal desires of my heart had been met. I didn't have to be fired and I didn't have to quit plus the company also had a smooth transition in place for the departure of my services, precisely as I had requested. The job just evaporated as quickly and easily as it had materialized!

I don't know how this always amazing Group does it (thankfully they take care of most of the details). But I absolutely know and trust that somehow what I desire and request will transpire. I feel such gratitude for the personal attention they give me and my heart is flooded with grateful thanksgiving for our relationship. I tell them often of my appreciation for them...but better yet, I genuinely feel that appreciation for them. I also feel and see the evidence of their love and appreciation for me!

(Note: It is really important you stay aware of the pulse of your life situation. As you master experiences and glean all you can from them, it is important you recognize when you have completed an adventure and are ready to call in another one so you can continue learning and expanding while you are here. Be open to change and welcome it. It is when you run from it or avoid it that you begin to create misery, frustration and fear which inevitably distracts you from swiftly moving on with your life mission).

In reflection, remember the desires of our hearts are often quickly and easily brought to us. We don't even have to search for them. When a knock comes to our door let's open it and have the courage to say, "Yes" to the opportunities being offered to us!

TAKE ACTION: Take a moment today to identify what you would love to experience. Add the details to it. Call together your Team and have a Council Meeting With them. Activate and follow through with the impressions they provide you. Don't know how to form that kind of meeting? The next chapter, HOW TO FORM A COUNCIL MEETING will share those details with you.

End Note: I would like to take a moment to thank Ellen, a supervisor in the cable TV business that I worked with. You were transferred before I was able to tell you of my sincere appreciation for all of your fine efforts. You were the perfect example of a bright, caring, calm, got it together kind of leader with a great head on your shoulders while being completely free of any ego or postulating. You were a beautiful person inside and out. It was a pleasure working with you.

CHAPTER 16

How To Form A Council Meeting

Perhaps you, too, would like to form your own Council Meeting but are unsure of how to accomplish this. If so, the following are directions describing how I create my meetings with my Team.

I initially ask for a Council Meeting to be formed by getting on my knees and uttering a formal prayer. I begin my supplication by respectfully recognizing my Creator by name (He is the head leader of my amazing Team). I refer to my Creator as Heavenly Father. I also ask for other members of my Team to join us and I often envision those individual members gathering in my behalf (I detailed who were on this Team in the chapter The Team, Power and the Divine).

I then give forth thanks and appreciation for the many blessings that have been given to me already. Long ago, I learned it is very important to flood my soul with thanks, gratitude and appreciation while making this connection. This action literally expands my soul to fully unite with my Team because love and appreciation drives this Power to create!

Next, it is vital that I openly communicate the desires of my heart concerning what changes I would like to see happen in my life. During this time, I include as many details as I feel is important so my preferred goal can be fleshed out. Those details help me to recognize that objective when it comes into my life. I also ask for assistance in the formation and creation of my plan.

Then, I close my supplication by recognizing the Savior who made the Power of my living At-one-ment with him (and them) possible through his atonement. Finally, I say, "Amen" to indicate I agree with what we have discussed and also to formally end our conversation.

In between the beginning and the end of each of our visits, I say a lot of words like: thee, thy, thine, and thou. But I learned long ago that my being able to fully connect to this loving group does not require a checklist of formalities. I am an inclusionary person and so is the Team I have personally come to know. From my experience, they just simply adore communicating with us and are definitely NOT concerned about our ability to speak to them in perfect biblical lingo. They know us and the desires of our hearts already. They enjoy it when we personally remember them.

This is an amazingly simple way to create profound results. It is also joy-filled and exhilarating at the same time—better than any feel-good drug or elixir mankind could create, except this experience has only positive benefits and zero negative side effects! That is precisely how it feels when you are connected with Them and in the flow of the Power which expands and moves you forward.

Praying With Your Whole Soul

Most of the time, I communicate with my Team as one being speaking or having a conversation with another, in much the same manner that you would talk or visit with a close companion here on earth.

One day, I began sharing some of my stories with four girlfriends while we were taking a day trip to Mesa, Arizona. After awhile, one of them stopped me and expressed confusion and consternation. She informed me that I wasn't praying the right way because I wasn't using the formal method and steps to which she was accustomed. She said I was just thinking and feeling what I desired throughout my day. Yet, at the same time, she admitted that she was moved by the amazing, miraculous results of my supplications, intentions and actions.

I totally understood where she was coming from. She was accustomed to praying only in the formal manner that she was taught—and that had been originally taught to me. To her, that method became the only acceptable way to contact the Divine. I reasoned that if that form of communication continued to satisfy her, and provide the results she was seeking, no problem. If it isn't broken, don't fix it, right?

I then told her what I was actually doing. I shared this personal information not because I was trying to prove that my avenue to the Divine was more desirable or acceptable: I did it because I just felt she might be interested in learning another route to get to the same goal.

Take my petite, 87 year-old Aunt Thelma for example. The majority of people I know like to take the I-10 freeway to travel from Casa Grande to Tucson. Not my Aunt Thelma. She prefers the frontage road. Sure, her method may require a little more time, but she enjoys this slower-paced route more than the rush of the highway and she still arrives at her destination.

I explained to my friend that while I might not communicate by means of the exact step-by-step formula we were both taught, I nonetheless enjoyed a deep and meaningful, personal communication with the Divine. I did not communicate with words alone. I communicated with every word, every thought and even with my feelings. I went on to say that when I went to my Team in prayer to share my desires and be counseled about my requests, every part of my soul connected with Them. Even the cells in my body partook of this experience. Together, as united beings that were one in purpose, we would form a plan and then collectively we would put that plan into action.

For me, this method of praying meant ritualistic, less meaningful, rote prayers could be thrown right out the window! I say this because that is what I felt I was doing when I prayed by means of the traditional method I was originally taught. While others might do this and stay focused and communicate in a sincere manner, my own mind would begin to wander. It just didn't feel like I was as fully engaged. That approach to prayer seemed more like a checklist to tick off instead of a genuine conversation with my Team members.

However, when my entire soul is speaking to my Team and listening to their responses I get back, it actually feels like my visits are more significant and meaningful. I don't have to wait until I can find a place to kneel to share the desires of my heart. In fact, my entire day is often drawn out in continuous prayer or meditation with these Beings.

We enjoy one another's company. We like being together. Our conversations are in the same form as I would have with my best friend. We joke and laugh with one another. I learned I could talk with Them about anything important in my life. Even SEX. And by the way, they have got some great, mind-blowing information on that subject (Sorry Mom...Did you just say, "Oh Gosh!"?). Anything of significance to me that I desired to understand was a-okay to discuss with Them.

Gifts of the Spirit

I could see from the expression on her face that my friend really understood what I was sharing with her. But more importantly, she also felt what I was feeling. Together, we experienced that contagious, warm, sweet, delightful, eternal love from the Divine.

Then she said, "I've read in the Scriptures that there were prophetesses. I believe you are one of them." I responded that I do indeed have the Power to receive prophecies and perhaps to some degree I am a prophetess about those things that touch my life and the lives of my loved ones as well as what I am responsible for or a steward over. I embrace my truth. But this gift is not offered uniquely to me.

Then, in order to put my gift into perspective, I further explained:

Even though there are many examples of men who were prophets, the Scriptures also say women and children were capable of receiving visions, healings and miracles on a regular basis. In fact, according to the Scriptures, all of us are capable of having gifts of the Spirit. If we are not regularly receiving and experiencing these amazing blessings it is only because we lack faith. When we choose to activate our faith and allow it to come alive in us, we all will rapidly see an increase in like situations come into our lives as well.

Actually, we all at one time knew these gifts and how to use them. Most of us have simply forgotten about our ability to utilize them. But at any time we can reawaken and begin to remember once again. This is why I am sharing this information with you. My hope and most ardent desire is that you will allow yourself to be brought back to a remembrance of your ability to purposefully use your Divine gifts. In fact, the majority of my clients begin to experience this remarkable, transforming awakening within the first hour of their training!

Your gift and eternal birthright is to purposefully create whatever you desire in this world, by connecting with the Divine.

You Ask, They Answer

This ability to ask and receive is more perfectly created when we put a plan together so we can more precisely identify what we desire. They already know. Be sure to include as much detail in that request as you feel is necessary, so when the answer comes your way you can recognize it and reach out to receive it.

Remember: Don't concern yourself with how the plan will be accomplished. Your opportunities will easily and quickly come to you. How hard did I search to find that collection business? The person extending that work came to my home! However, do completely trust and believe it will be created for you. Let deep feelings of appreciation and excitement to swell within you for the adventure that is NOW coming your way. And then, simply relax and allow yourself to receive what you asked for...a pretty fabulous way to live life!

TAKE ACTION: Okay. It is time to GO FOR IT! FORM THAT COUNCIL MEETING! Speak to them with a deep sincere desire to completely connect with them. ## About The Author

Pamela Ann is a native Tucsonan and a Renaissance Woman; entrepreneur, writer, teacher, artist, published designer, patented inventor, community leader... She happily lives what she teaches. Recently she restructured and organized a foreign resort in only 16 months. The resort is now flourishing.

In her professional life, she develops and runs only successful businesses which have included a private school, The Haven an Adventure in Living, as well as a collection agency for COX Cable. The collection agency business was in the "black" and making a profit the first month it was created.

Pamela Ann is also one of the principals in the development of nationally known EZ Messenger with her husband Ron. They have been married for more than forty years. When the economics of the country were faltering, Pamela Ann and Ron stayed focused on their goals and dreams then hired 100 people. Simply Amazing!

Pamela Ann knows from personal experience how to triumph over the most crippling effects of life's challenges and then go forth to live a happy satisfying joy filled adventure.

She was bedridden for over a decade and shook with excruciating pain from Fibromyalgia, autoimmune disease, severe environmental sensitivities, hypoglycemia, multiple heart attacks, debilitating depression and profound low blood pressure (the doctor and nurses could not record it at the hospital when they conducted the tilt table test for her!).

Happily she has been able to overcome and master all of these challenges except for one. She is still learning more and expanding because of this opportunity that she has drawn to her. She is absolutely certain that situation will also be mastered when she chooses to release it; but only after it has served its value for her.

She personally knows what it feels like to experience deep personal loss, abandonment and rejection, crippling molest, physical violence and mental abuse, soul shaking fear and loneliness while standing in the middle of a crowded room. She understands how to release all of those sabotaging, distracting circumstances and live a life that is filled with abiding love, hope, joy, acceptance and peace.

Pamela Ann is a mother of four adult children and has adopted numerous children into her heart and family. She also enjoys her many grandchildren. This nurturing woman is a gifted, compassionate mentor, leader, consultant and friend.

Those who have trained with her, and have grown to know her, have called her an Elder, Healer, Master, Doña and Prophetess. Remember that Pamela always quickly qualifies that last title.

That powerful personal information bears repeating: We each have the ability to receive revelations, visions, healings and work mighty miracles. Christ has told us that we can do all that he had done and more now; in this lifetime. We can receive information about the past, present and future at anytime. This information is given to assist us with our personal lives and the lives of our family as well as what we are stewards over.

All men women and children have the ability to develop these gifts. They are not limited to only a few of us.

In fact, if we are not having these experiences on a regular basis it is simply because we lack active faith...because faith without works, or activation within our souls, is dead.

The more important topic of discussion is. 'DO YOU BELIEVE THIS

IS YOUR TRUTH?’ Pamela Ann’s unwavering answer is, “YES!”

Through all of her sixty plus years of life adventures and experiences, Pamela Ann has gleaned a treasure trove of knowledge in how to create and command the life she prefers through connecting with those who literally created this world. This valuable information is drawn from simple eternal laws that consistently provide remarkable results!

She is now sharing these precious jewels with the world.
